

ABSTRACT

A novel method and system are herein described for enabling communications between distributed network objects. In general, a system and method for providing 5 communications between network objects, the means and steps of said system and method comprising: registering said objects desiring communications; accepting a communications message from at least one of said objects, said communication addressing one of said plurality of network objects; determining the mode of message delivery for said message; delivering said message according to the mode of message 10 delivery determined.